Successive Opponents in an Hour.

To give an idea of what a brave man can do if he knows fencing thoroughly, and but keep cool and collected in danger, we will relate an historical duel. So extraordinary is this combat that it would be held a whole army. The hero is Jean Louis, one of the great masters of the beginning of this century, and the duel happened in Madrid in 1813. He was the master-at-arms of the Thirty-second regiment of French infantry; the First regiment, composed entirely of Italians, formed a part of the same brigade. Regimental esprit de corps and rivalries of nationality caused constant quarrels, when swords were often whipped out or bullets exchanged. After a small battle had occurred in the streets of Madrid, in which over 200 hundred French and Italian soldiers had taken part, the officers of the two regiments decided to give such breaches of order a great blow and, to re-estab-lish discipline, they decreed that the master-at-arms of the two regiments should take up arms and light it out.

Imagine a whole army in battle ar ray on one of the large plains that surround Madrid. In the center a large ring is left open for the contestants. This spot is raised above the plain, so that not one of the spectators will miss one phase of the contest. The drum was heard; two men, naked to the waist, step in the ring. The first is tall and strong, his black eyes move disdainfully upon the gaping crowd; he is Giacomo Ferrari, the celebrated Italian. The second, tall, also hand-some, and with muscles like steel, stands modestly awaiting the word of command; his name is Jean Louis. The witnesses assume their places on either side of their principals. A death-like silence ensues. "On guard!" The two masters cross swords; Giacomo Ferrari lunges repeatedly at Jean Louis; but in vain; his every thurst is met by a parry. He makes up his mind to bide his chance, and caresses and teases his opponent's blade. Jean Louis, calm and watchful, lends himself to the play, when quicker than light-ning, the Italian jumps aside with a loud yell, and makes a terrible lunge at Jean Louis—a Florentine trick, often successful. But with extraorninary rapidity Jean Louis has parried, and risposts quickly in the shoulder.

"It is nothing," cries Giacoma, "a mere scratch," and they again fall on guard; almost directly he is hit in his breast. This time the great of the street of the screen of Land breast. This time the sword of Jean Louis, who is now attacking, penetrates deeply, Giamco's face becomes livid, his sword falls heavily on the turf. He is dead.

Jean Louis is already in position; he wipes his recking blade, then with the point of his sword in the ground, he calmly awaits the next man,

The best fencer of the First regiment has just been carried away a corpse; but the day is not yet over. Fourteen adversaries are there, impatient to measure swords with the conqueror burning to avenge the master they had deemed invinciable.

Jean Louis has hardly had two minutes' rest. He is ready. A new adversary stands before him. A sinister click of swords is heard; a lunge, a parry, a rispost and then a cry, a sigh, and all is over. A second body is before Jean Louis.

A third adversary advances. They vanted Jean Louis to rest. "I am not tired," he answered with a smile.

The signal is given. The Italian has closely watched Jean Louis' play and thinks he has guessed the secret of his victories. He multiplies his feints and tricks, then, all at once, bounding like a tiger on his prey, he gives his opponent a terrible thrust in the lower line, But Jean Louis' sword has parried and is now deep within his opponent's breast.

What need to relate any more; ten new adversaries followed him, and the ten men fell before Jean Louis amid the excited yells and roars of the army.

At the request of the Thirty-second regiment colonel's, who thought the pressing, consented to stop the combat, and he shook hands with the two survivors, applauded by ten thousand men.

This wonderful and gigantic combat might be held a fable were not all the facts above stated still found in the archives of the ministry of war. An eminent Presbyterian divine announced to his congregation that he
